Boys Anti-Tank Rifle : See page 47 of the Afrika Korpse

De Lisle Carbine : The entry on page 80 of Blood on the Rhine is incorrect. The weapon is a bolt action weapon, not a semi-automatic.

Lee Enfield, No.3 : The attributes of the No.4 are also used for the SMLE or No.3 rifle. The No.3 was the standard British rifle until the No.4 was introduced to the army in 1941.

Lee Enfield, No.4 : This weapon has a detachable magazine that can also be loaded from a stripper clip. The Ammo column has been ammended below. Note, the Lee Enfield rifles use detachable magazines. As well as manual loading these can be loaded in the weapon when the bolt is open via a charger clip. The No.4 is 44½" and has a 25" barrel.

Lee Enfield, No.5 : The No.5 or "Jungle Carbine" was introduced in 1944 for airborne troops. Its is 39½" long and has a shorter barrel. It was only called the Jungle Carbine on the American market. It had problems with a wandering zero. In game terms if a character makes more than 1 shot per round, add a cumulative -1 penalty on top of any other penalties.

Lewis Gun : A US designed weapon that did not find favour over there, this weapon was adopted by the British in 1914 and were produced under licence by BSA. It was used by the Americans until 1920 when they replaced it with the Browning. It was used throughout WW2 by the British and Commonwealth troops.

Webley Mk.6 : This was the standard army pistol throughout the First World War and for much of the second. It fired a .455 round which was slightly less powerful than the .45 ACP round.
